

Instructions for the Stannah Stair Lift at The Wesley Centre.

1. Find the power key hanging adjacent to the stairs:

2. Insert key and switch to 'ON'

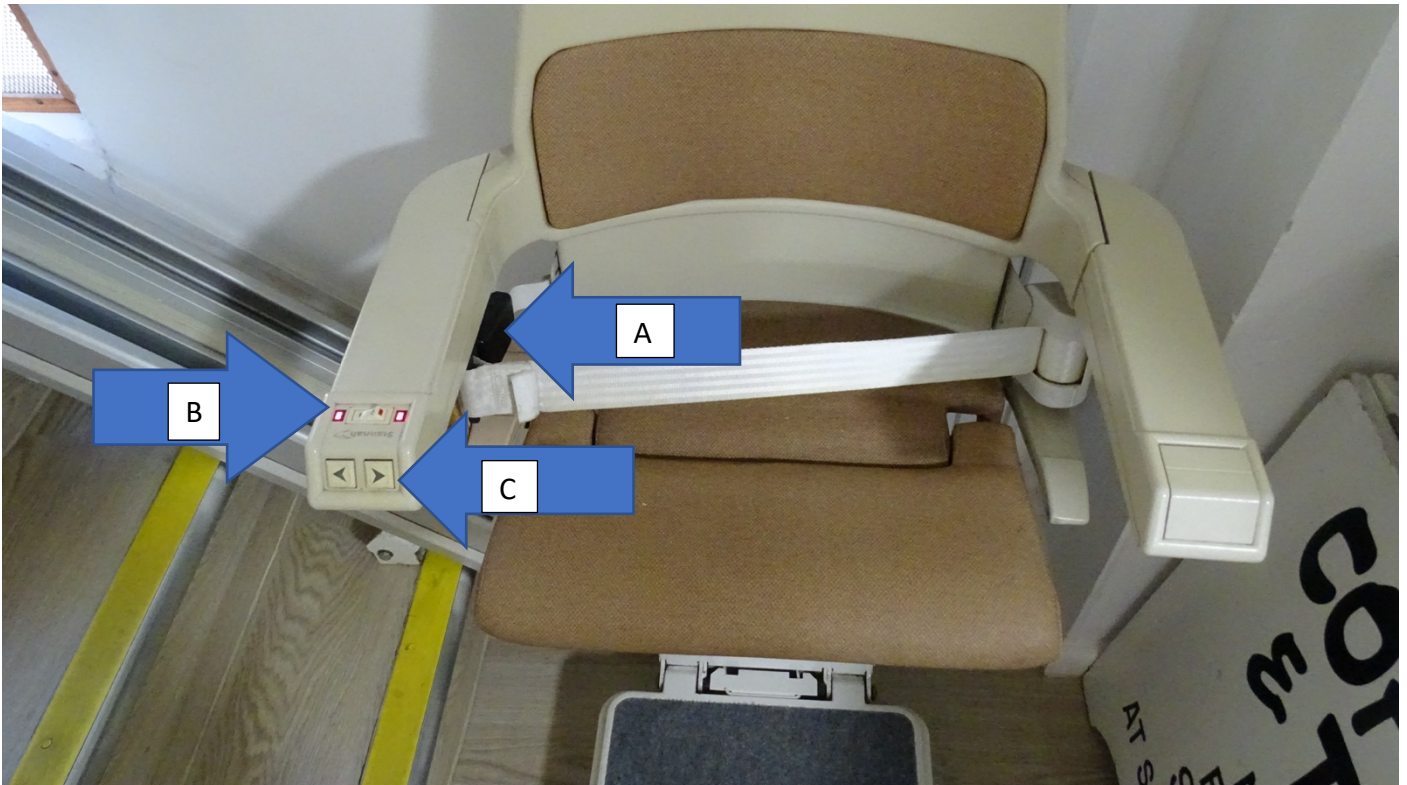

3. Pull arms and seat pad towards you. Please take care to stand clear as the footplate will drop into place automatically as you pull the seat pad.

4. Sit the passenger in the chair with their feet on the footplate.

Pull the safety belt across their lap sliding the metal buckle into place with an audible click (A) just as you would in a car. Switch the power button (B) in the arm to on. A second indicator will light up.

5. The stair lift is now ready for action. The passenger can control the chair using the direction buttons (C). Should they not be able to, there are override buttons adjacent to the chair lift at both ends of the staircase.

6. At the top of the staircase the chair is rotated by lifting handle (A). These handles are on both sides of the chair for ease of use. Rotate the chair to the passengers right so that their knees are now facing the level surface. Undo the safety belt and the passenger can move away safely. Please ensure that the seat is returned (by way of reversing this process) to the bottom of the stairs for storage while not in use so it does not cause an obstruction.

Chair in rotated position with safety belt stowed.

Stair lift users please note:

1. This stairlift is given a multi-point function check once per week and is regularly serviced by a qualified engineer.
2. Should there be an electrical failure while this chair is in use there is a means of manual operation (not shown here). Stored at the bottom of the stairs there is a piece of equipment which looks like an oversize drawing pin. This should be inserted into the corresponding hole in the stairlift rail and used as a manual crank to bring the chair to the desired position.
Please consider the safety and comfort of your passenger before taking such action.
3. In the unlikely event of you finding a fault with this stairlift please report your finding, without delay, to the Centres manager at the Trinity Church Office. Or call (01425) 461440
